MPH (N) 2022

Procedure for Selection and Admission to MPH (N) 2022 at Maharashtra State Government Medical Colleges.

1. INTRODUCTION:

Master of Public Health (Nutrition) is an intensive two-year course designed to create cadre of public health nutrition specialists to tackle malnutrition. This course provide an excellent knowledge and skills in Public Health Nutrition. National Nutrition Mission which got established in 2017 targets at reduction in the level of under-nutrition and other related problems like stunting, under-nutrition, anemia and low birth weight babies. It is essential and need of the hour to strengthen knowledge and skills contributing to the development of a cadre of public health nutrition professionals in respect to life cycle approach. The program is divided into classroom-based course work and field-based practical experience in Public Health Nutrition. The project assignment is to be undertaken as a core part of the course curriculum. The course provides systematic coverage of major topics in the area of Public Health Nutrition based on international standards. The course is designed based on latest international evidence and standards in Public Health Nutrition. The course curriculum is designed with technical support from UNICEF, and experts in Public Health Nutrition belonging to academia and medical education.

2. Program Rationale:

Under nutrition is often an invisible problem. There is a critical window of opportunity to prevent under nutrition by taking care of the nutrition of children in the first two years of life, girls during adolescence, and mothers during pregnancy and lactation – when proven Public Health Nutrition interventions offer children the best chance to survive and reach optimal growth and development.

In light of the above context, the policymakers, program planners and national and international experts are concerned about the health and nutritional status of women and children in the country, and its impact on the country's economic progress. This has resulted in the design and implementation of national flagship programs such as the National Rural Health Mission (NRHM), restructuring and universalization of the Integrated Child Development Services (ICDS) with quality, special plans to address health and nutrition issues in the most vulnerable populations in rural, tribal and urban areas. The scenario calls for a large number of skilled professionals trained both in Public Health and Nutrition to contribute to improved planning and implementation of the national flagship programs.

Until recently most health and nutrition professionals have been contributing independently with limited impact on addressing critical issues related to maternal-child health and nutrition, and other public health problems at scale. It was increasingly felt that there was a strong need to develop a comprehensive approach to build capacities of professionals in Public Health Nutrition. Therefore, there is a need to offer a master's program (MPH) in Nutrition. The course intend to provide health and nutrition practitioners/professionals with a broad background and training in Public Health Nutrition, and prepare them for career opportunities in a public health nutrition setting.

3. Aims and Objectives of the course:

1. To provide a sound understanding of the science of nutrition and public health.
2. To provide advanced knowledge and skills in Public Health Nutrition and provide a scientific basis for assessment and management of nutritional problems of vulnerable populations.
3. To build capacities to undertake research projects in the area of Public Health Nutrition.
4. To enhance knowledge and skills for improved program planning, management and evaluation of programs in a Public Health Nutrition setting.
5. Future Prospects : The career prospects for candidates opting for MPH in Public Health Nutrition are excellent.
